

February 28, 2016

During the summer of 2015, Jason spent time in my lab learning basic applications work in the personal care industry. He performed quality control tests for products that include pH measurement, viscosity testing, and specific gravity measurement. He also made lab batches of cosmetic formulas under my direct supervision.

Jason is smart and highly motivated. His interests include computer technology (he did a robotics project in school), science, math, and music (for Valentine's Day this year, he composed a piano piece for a girl he likes and even posted it in YouTube). He is a very quick learner and has a very disciplined work ethic.

Sharing part of my professional experience with Jason is my very small contribution to his future.

Best,
